

USES OF GLYCERIN.

Has Many Practical Uses Not Generally Understood.

There are some articles which we have about the house so much that we almost cease to think what we can use them for, says the Philadelphia Ledger. We have had them so long and used them in the same ways so often that we rarely think of trying them in a new way.

Perhaps the most common of these articles is glycerin. Coffee stains can be removed from table linen and from the most delicate silks by brushing the spot with glycerin. Rinse with lukewarm water and press on the wrong side. If the material is very delicate, care should be taken not to wet more of it than possible and to have the iron very cool.

Peach stains can be removed from wash material by moistening the spot with glycerin. Let it stand for awhile and then wash. Glycerin is also used to freshen book linings. Dissolve one ounce of pure white glycerin in a pint of water, add a tablespoonful of glycerin and a tablespoonful of flour or rice paste. Apply with a soft brush and rub with a chamois skin. This preparation is only used for calf bindings.

Inking pads for rubber stamps may be relined by means of aniline dyes of suitable color mixed to the consistency of thick cream with glycerin, and this valuable liquid may also be rubbed on the window glass after it has been washed to keep the windows from becoming steamy.

To remove stains from white flannel, take equal parts of glycerin and yolk of egg. Soak the spot and wash in soft water. Glycerin has great softening properties. It can be used to soften the water. Try two tablespoonfuls of glycerin in the water in which you soak your clothes, and two tablespoonfuls of glycerin in the boiling water.

Add a tablespoonful of glycerin to the water with which the floor is scrubbed. It will not only soften the water, help make the table and floor white, but will protect the hands and keep them soft and white.

When the children's shoes are hard after being wet, apply a little glycerin, after they have become dry with a piece of absorbent cotton. They will absorb and the next day will be as soft as ever. Patent leather shoes can sometimes be kept from cracking if glycerin is used to soften them.

But glycerin is also used in cooking. Did you ever try measuring a teaspoonful of glycerin to each pound of fruit when cooking jelly or preserves, to keep a sugary coat from forming on top?

When fruit is stewed, use one tablespoonful of glycerin to each pound of fruit, either fresh or dried. Any fruit requiring sugar is improved by the addition of glycerin.

A glycerin poultice softens a hard corn so that it can be peeled off in layers without pain. Apply a piece of linen wet with glycerin, cover with oiled silk and bandage. This should be applied every night after the corn has been bathed. If the corn is protected during the day and the treatment applied steadily, the corn will soon be cured.

Glycerin mixes with water readily. It is said to be a good wash and softener for the hands. Glycerin is a by-product of soap and candle factories. All fats contain it. For this reason a person having a greasy skin rarely finds glycerin helpful or beneficial in softening the skin; but those who have drier skins and need the king of food that glycerin contains find it very useful and helpful.

Gatun Lock; Gates Partly Open

THE Gatun locks proved to be quite a determining factor in the building of the Panama canal. When the work was started there was a saying that "the length of time it takes to build the canal depends on the time it takes to build the Culebra cut." But later the words "Gatun locks" were substituted for "Culebra cut."

There is a system of three twin locks at Gatun. Two million five hundred thousand cubic yards of concrete were used in their construction. In conjunction with the Gatun dam they serve to hold back the tremendous force of water from the Gatun lake, which is eighty-five feet above sea level. Three levels of locks raise boats from the Atlantic level to the eight-five foot level.

THE VERY BEST OF ITS KIND.

No Doubt That Kit Carson Buffalo Ranch Bill Three-Ring Wild West Circus is the Best Attraction of its Character in Existence.

The above attraction, which will exhibit at Laurens on Friday April 3rd, afternoon and night, is without doubt the largest and best amusement enterprise of its kind extant. No expense has been spared to make it so. Coming as they do, with their peerless troop of men, of all nations, the pioneers of the west, Indians of nearly all tribes, their daring Cowboys, beautiful Cowgirls, Zouaves, Cosacks, Mexicans, Arabs, cavalry of the United States, Germany, France and England, they are well prepared to give us the very best performance we have ever had the good fortune to witness. And no doubt we will in return give them a packed arena. Excursions are to be run from all points and we will have one of the biggest crowds here that we have ever had. But Laurens can well take care of them and will entertain them in her usual style. Two performances will be given on April 3. And don't forget that date.

Several features of this world famous attraction are the young laddies of the western plains in their remarkable riding and shooting, Cavalry of many nations, including our own boys in blue, Indians from all tribes, Cosacks from Russia, the finest horsemen in the world, Vaqueros from Mexico, Cowboys in trick and fancy riding and many others which we have not space at present to mention.

The mile long parade will take place before the performance begins and all should seek the main thoroughfares and secure a suitable point from which to witness this great cavalcade.
